ELEGANT EDITION The HOLY BIBLE.

PROPOSALS For Printing by Subscription, (in four handsome tons. Apply to octavo volumes) THE HOLY BIBLE.

CINTAINING The Old and New Testaments.

CONDITIONS. It shall be printed on a superfine wove paper, with an elegant new type. The price to fabicribers will be Two Dollars

Cents, handfomely bound and lettered. To those who subscribe for several copies, a discount will be made, proportioned to the num per vol. in boards, or Two Dollars and Fifty ber subscribed for. THE advantage of having this invaluable Book print-ed on a large type, and, at the fame time, in portable and convenient volumes, appears to evident, that the encouragement necessary to warrant an undertaking of such magnitude, is confidently expected; a portable volume would often be taken up, in a moment of leifure, when the fize of a large, unwieldy folio, would operate as an apology for leaving it unopened, in this way, small por-tions of time would be profitably employed, which might otherwise be totally loft. In large families a Bible in volumes, affording an opportunity for feveral to read at once, may fometimes be peculiarly convenient: it feems superfluous to add much on this subject.—soffice it to say, that no reasonable expence or pains shall be spared, to render this edition of the Holy Scriptures both correct and elegant.

The above work is in prefs, and will be finished about the end of the present year. Subscriptions received by R. and J. Gray, King street, where a spe-

Congress of the United States.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

I recollect a time, Sir, when a freign minister in this country, at a moment when genius, fancy, and ardent patriotism, were lords of the ascendant over learning, wisdom, and experience, spoke of the law of nations and its principles as mere worm eaten authorities, and aphorisms of Vattel, and others. I also recollect that the illustrious man, who is now President of the United States, was then Secretary of State, and that he delivered the unanimous sentiments of the American people, when, in his reply to that minister, he observed that something more than mere sarsams of that kind was necessary to disprove those authorities and principles; and that until they were disproved, the American nation would hold itself bound by them. This is the man, Sir, who has been so injuriously calumniated within these walls this morning, and upon whom such a torrent of bitter eloquence has been poured by a gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. Purviance) a gentleman who is himself a model of eloquence, uniting all the excellencies of Cicero and Demosthens, and all other ora-

The American people, in forming their constitution, had an eye to that law of nations, which is deducible by natural reason, and established by common consent, to regulate the intercourse and concerns of nations. With a view to this law the treaty making power was constituted, and by virtue of this law, the government and people of the United States, in common with all other nations, possess the power and right of making acquisitions of territory by conquest, cession, or purchase. Indeed the gentleman who deny us the right of acquiring by purchase, would probably allow us to keep the territory, were it obtained by conquest.

them, and of course are national property; colonial territory may be transferred from one nation to another by purchase; this purchase can be effected by treaty alone, as nations do not, like individuals, execute deeds, and cause them to be recorded in public offices; that department of the gov. ernment of the nation purchasing, which possesses the treaty making power generally, is competent to make treaties for that purpose. These positions are established by the law of nations, & are applicable to the case before us. Here Mr. E. read a variety of extracts from Vattel to establish these positions, and observed that they were corroborated by Grotius, Puffendorf, and other emment writers on the law of nature and nations, whose works he had consulted.]

A mere recapitulation, and that not a tedious one, of these principles and authorities will now answer the present purpose. Colonies have always been considered as national property, although the law or practice of nations, in this instance, may not conform to the law of nature Greece treated her colonies with peculiar indulgence: Rome considered any privileges which her's were suffered to possess, as mere matters of grace, not of right. The one was a natural and tender parent, the other 2 cruel stepmother. Yet I have no recollection that the Grecian colonies in Asia Minor, Italy, or even at Ionia, were represented in the Amphyctionic Council, the general assembly of the states of Greece. The claim of the British colonies, which now constitute the United States, to be represented in that body by which they were taxed, tho' just in itself was novel and unwarranted by the practice of nations. Thank God the claim was successful, and in consequence of it we are now here as the representatives of the American people, deliberating upon their most important interests. It is unnecessary to reiterate the other positions; they are undeniable in themselves, and their applicability to the present case will hardly be disputed. If the treaty be extremely pernicious, or has not been made by sufficient authority, or has been made for unjust purposes, it is void by the laws

Another ground of objection to the constitutionality of the treaty is taken. It is said that a clause of the constitution which forbids any preference, as to duties and privileges, being given to the ports of one state over those of another, is irreconcileable with the seventh article of the treaty, by which "it is agreed between the contract-

lonies, loaded only with the produce or where no bleak wind blows from its mountains, manufactures of France or her said colonies; and the ships of Spain coming directly from Spain or any of her colonies loaded only with the produce or manufactures of Spain or her colonies, shall be admitted during the space of twelve years in the ports of New Orleans, and in all other legal ports of entry within the ceded territory, in the same manner as the ships of the United States coming directly from France or Spain, or any of their colonies, without being subject to any other or greater duty on the merchandize, or other or greater tonnage than that paid by the citizens of the United States." Let us again enquire with what views, and for what objects, the constitution was formed. The articles of confederation were but a feeble band of union, the "shadow of a shade," to borrow a poetical expression, of a federal system. -Several states, sovereign and independent with respect to many objects, united under a national government as it respected the most important national objects, and formed a federal system, novel in its nature, and unequalled in the annals of all ages and nations. The states as such were equal, and intended to preserve that equality; and the provision of the constitution alluded to, was calculated to prevent Congress from making any odious discriminations or distinctions between particular states. No preference shall be given to the ports of one state over those of another state. It was not contemplated that this provision would have any application to colonial or territorial acquisitions. But it is said that the treaty obliges us to receive the inhabitants of the ceded territory into the union, and of course to form them into new states. By the treaty-" The inhabitants of the ceded territory shall be incorporated in the union of the United States, and admitted as soon as possible, according to the principles of the federal constitution, to the enjoyment of all the rights, advantages and immunities of citizens of the United States." This stipulation of the treaty is of a novel, singular, and carious nature, but does not diminish my zeal to have it carried into effeet: A complete discretion is left to the United States as to the time and manner of Colonies, or provinces, are a part of the admission; and I have no idea that it will minent domain of the nation possessing | be necessary to admit them within the twelve years during which France and Spain are to enjoy those privileges. The eloquent and honorable member from Virginia (Mr. R.) took a very different view of this subject, which of itself was perfectly satisfactory to my mind, and I could take still other views equally satisfactory. There can be no possible violation of the constitution.

The expediency of the treaty is another question, and an important one. I once hoped that the interests of our country would never require an extension of its limits, and I regret even that that necessity now exists. Evils and dangers may be apprehended from this source, and great evils and dangers may possibly result. But the regions of possibility are illimitable: those of probability are marked by certain well defined boundaries, obvious to all men of reason and reflection, and, in the language

As br ad and obvious to the paffing Clown, As to the letter'd sage's curious eve.

If we cannot find, in the peculiar principles of the form of our governmet, and in the virtue and intelligence of our citizens, a fuffi tent fecurity against the dangers from a widely extended territory, in vain shall we feek is elsewhere. There is no magical quality in a degree of latitude or lo gitude, river or a mountain. And it has been well remarked that every danger from this quarter might have been apprehended before the acquifition of this territory. The Roman Empire, or that of Alexander in the zenich of its glory, was scarcely capable of containing a greater population than the serritory of the United States; and men conversant with bistory do not wonder at the transient existence and rapid ruin of these em pires. I repeat it, Mr. Chairman, we must look. for our fecurity in principles and circumstances inapplicable to the arcient nations. With the present question of expediency, I confess, fir, are naturally intermingled many confiderations, infinitely interesting to the future peace, prosperity, telicity and glory of our beloved country. The physical strength of anation depends upon an aggragation of circumstances, amongst which, com pactness of population, as well as territory, may be reckoned, our population may become too feattered; but this too is only a possible event. These possible evils ought not to be put in competition with the certain advantage, which we derive from the accuifition.

But a gentleman tells us that the administration hold out to us an Elen of the western world, a land flowing with milk and honey, while they have obtained nothing but a dreary and barron wilderness. Perhaps, if the gentleman be correct, the acquifition is scarcely the less important. To demonstrate the advantages of this pu chase, it is not necessary to describe by to the point in discussion. The chairman, Louisiana as an Elysian region, to describe it, as Mr. Dawson, replied that it had not been cusing parties, that the French ships coming Homer does the Fortunate Islands, a region, on tomary, in committee, to confine gentlemen to directly from France or any of her co-, whole auspicious climate even winter finiles narrow limits in their remark.]

and no gale is felt but the zeypher, diffufing health and pleafure. But from geographical in. formation, defective as it is, and from resionable analogies, we may conclude that, with the exception of sime considerable tracts, it is a country fertile and falchrious. Geography points us to China, Perfia, India, Arabia Felix and Japan, countries fituated in corresponding latitudes, which though always overshadowed by the horrid gloom of despotism, are always productive, and teaches us by analogy that Louisians in natural fertility, is probably equal to those beautiful ori-ential regions. The gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. Purviance) says he shall vote for carrying the treaty into effect, because the possession of the territory is important, and the administration, nos having as it ought to have done, made use of men to obtain it, he will consent to make use of me. ney. He has applied many curious epithets to the administration : he wishes for an administration athl fix and mufcular, meaning I surpose, like the wrestlers in the Grecian circus, or the gladie. tors in that of Rome. When I came within these walls seir. I ardently hoped that the voice of party would be silent during the discussion of this subject, and I wid not expect to hear the administration attacked in the language of vulgari. ty, maligning and factions furt. When it is thus assailed, fhall its defenders be silent? During the last session of Congress, an extraordinary degree of agitation was produced in the public mind, by an egregious violation of our rights by an officer of the Spanish government. Neither the people sor the government were d'acient in that spirit which the gentleman extols, but they were not governed by false ideas of national honour, and they were acquainted with the law of nations; they knew we had no right to make the denunciatio belli precede the repetitio rerum a dec aration of war precede a demand of justice. Other epithets which the gentleman applies to hs favorite administration I believe justly belong to the present one; bold, firm, intrepid, manly, wirinous spirited, it is owing to its wise and tim e at consuct that we a e not now engaged in the horrors of war, and it has erected an immortal monument to its own glory. Yet we hear of mallicious subaltern, and the epithet com. ardly - (M. Purviance here interrepted, and observed that he did not use those expressions) -Mr. Elliot proceeded. I wrote them down the mo. ment the gentle can uttered them, and I could not understand them otherwise than as intended to have at leas a remote application to the president of the United States; I hope the gentle. man had no such intention. That we did not go to war, though peculiarly happy for our country, was probable unfortunate for that gentleman, as in that event, he might have displayed, at the head of a triumphant army, these military talents which he undoubtedly possesses in an equal degree with his oratorical powers. I must remark upon another extraordinary part of that extreordinary speech. Was it politic, was it prudent, was it just, at a moment when such an important negociation between the French and American governments was closing, for a representetive of the American people to labor to gratate the French, or any portion of our own prople, by ardent declamation against what is caled the unbounded ambition and rapacity of the French Consul? The gentleman thas told us what his great predecessor, but not equal, in elague ce. Edinand Burke, told us long ago, that the age of chivalry is gone. But why turn out attention at this moment, to Switzerland, to Italy, to Hanover, to the bloody scenes of revolutionary France herself? He deplores the fate of the royal Capetes, devoted to destruction by the pert younglings of a day.

If the F ench revolution has been unsuccess ful, if the hopes of the triends of man and liberty have not been gratified, if the whole easters world is still to groan under the iron hand of des. p tism, is it a subject of such deep regret, that & gleam of light has darted athwart the horrid gloom that we have for a time anticipated, though we have failed to realise, the blessings of extended liberty ? It is sather a subject of pleasure, and gratitude to Heaven. The First Consul is styled a Corsican usurper. I believe, Sir, that there is not with a these walls an admirer of the present g verament of Fance. But we all know the the distinction between a king or government de jure and de facts. If Bonaparte be not the rightful ruler of the French Republic, he is the actual possessor of the powers of government, and can bind the nation by treaties. If the Bonaparin shell have followed the Capetion race to the regions of the tomb, when the exchange of the ratifications of this treaty shall reach Paris, it will not be the less ob igatory upon the French na-

The gentleman to whom I have so often alluded denies all merit to the President and the A perican negociators, and says that the king of Great Britain was our only meritorious and surcessful negociator. With ur attributing to the President the powers of prophecy, I must hazard the opinion, that in common with all philosophic politicians, he foresaw that the peace between France and Great Britain would not be permanent. The elements of war were mingled with

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 12.

The evils resulting from the economies of our government, are now sensibly felt by the merchants of Charleston. A small French privateer, mounting a few swivels, has for several days completely blockaded our port, bringing to all vessels inward and outward bound. Yet we are compelled to submit to this indignity; for no means of redress present themselves; not a single armed American cruiser is suffered to protect our coast, or commerce, but are all peaceably laid up in the "dry docks" of Washington, "food for worms." In the mean time their temerity increases in proportion with our forbearance; and from our wharves we may behold the humiliating sight of American vessels pursued into our verv harbour.

The brig Columbia capt. Taylor, was chased the greater part of yesterday by the privateer, and followed this morning neary up to Sullivan's Island. Such daring infractions of our neutrality surely demand the spirited interference of our government.

Foreign Summary.

The military force of Great-Britain, including volunteers, &c. &c. is estimated at near a million, and the subscriptions in town and country for the support of the war, at ner 300,000l. sterling.

The French admiral Linois with a 74, two frigates and a number of transports had sailed about the 10 h of June from the Cape of Good Hope, for Pondicherry.

A general spirit of disaffection towards the French was prevalent in Tuscany.

That rigid measures had been adopted in Spain, to repress a spirit of disaffection which manifested itself among the people. That the emperor of Morocco had declared war against the Genoese, and had seized one of their vessels at Tangiers.

That Portugal had submitted to the demands of the French, as made by general Lasnes and Don Jose De Almeida, of the foreign department, dismissed; and M. Pinto, put in his place.

That Spain had made a compromise to the naval aid which by the treaty of 1798, she was bound to render France, a sum of money is to be substituted—3,000,000l. sterling per ann. is named as the price of this indulgence.

court, respecting Hanover had not been attended with success, in consequence of which an alliance offensive and defensive was on the point of taking place, between that monarch and Austria.

That the courts of Naples and Portugal had appealed to the emperor of Russia to protect them by his mediation from a French invasion, and that he had promised to exert it.

That all the effects of his Britannic maesty, as elector of Hanover, are daily transported to France, and that the inhabitants, exclusive of other exertions, are obliged to allow the sum of 12,000 dollars per month for the Tables of the French generals in that city. That the advance of the army in Ceylon, commanded by col. Logan, of the 51st attacked, and carried on the 19th February, the important ports of Galle Gederah and Giriagamme, and on the 26th the whole army under general M'Donald narched into the capital of the kingdom of Candy, which the king and first adigaar had abandoned to take shelter in the province of Ouva.
